

EXPOSITORY WRITING ACTIVITIES FOR ELEMENTARY STUDENTS

Upper Elementary Writing Office. Writing offices are great . Great tips for getting started teaching expository writing to your third and fourth graders. Persuasive.

Ask each student to describe her favorite place, the view from her bedroom window or a perfect sunset. How to Jump Rope 3. I appreciate it! Explain why it is important for students to follow our classroom rules. References ProTeacher: Writing - Descriptive Writing About the Author This article was written by a professional writer, copy edited and fact checked through a multi-point auditing system, in efforts to ensure our readers only receive the best information. Once all strips have been placed in order, the reader reads aloud the strips the group placed in order. Describe how things will be different for you in middle school when you have a locker to put your things in. Each student has a specific job: reader, recorder, and time keeper. Steps to Create an Essay Before students begin writing, teachers can share how the students will be assessed. Provide students with a strategy for making choices with this activity on comparing two options. Explain why it matters to your family and how you perform the tradition. It is student tested and teacher approved! Step 5 Do some cause and effect expository writing. One activity the students absolutely love is the "how to" activity. Think of your favorite TV show and explain why you like it better than other programs. Next, students should write their final copy. Describe how you feel and what you think the experience will be like. Encourage them to consider using similes, metaphors, and other figurative language. When you have a good selection of ideas in each box, ask students to evaluate which box has the strongest reasons. Describe the best ways to maintain good grades in middle school. Explain why other people should admire this person. Define what being a good listener means to you, and explain ways you can be a good listener in your new middle school environment. When the students are satisfied that their compositions are complete, they exchange with someone else in the class. How to Tie Your Shoe The scenarios are cut into strips, and the groups have to put the strips in order of how you would complete each scenario. Depending on the age of the student, teacher can assign a length. As a follow-up to this activity, they as a group create their very own "how to" scenario. This lesson focused on adjectives and adverbs can be fun and informative at the same time. Define the characteristics that make a good friend. The expository activities should help students to write strong essays and to be interactive. High school students can be longer. Importance of Details and Sequence Students sometimes have difficulty with organization in their writing. Use these 33 new prompts in your 1st, 2nd, and 3rd grade classrooms to help students learn the valuable skill of expository writing! Define what qualities make someone a good student. One way to assess the writing is by using a rubric. Expository writing is a method of writing in which the author describes, informs, or explains a topic to the reader. In this lesson, I have the students divide into groups, usually three students. Explain several reasons that a uniform might be more convenient for students than choosing their own clothes. And if you can get middle school students excited about writing, well, miracles have taken place! When you enter middle school, describe some ways that you can go about making new friends.