

NKBA APPROVED COLLEGE COURSEWORK

The National Kitchen & Bath Association acknowledges the following schools have joined with the Association to promote best practices in education and real opportunity for the next generation of kitchen and bath professionals. Note: An asterisk () denotes an NKBA Founding School.*

Estimate the costs of and develop a budget for required project materials. The principles of the color wheel, the connection between colors and psychology, and the use of colors to create a certain ambiance. Business for Interior Designers—the business and legal side of being an interior designer. Degree must include 60 semester or 90 quarter units of coursework in interior design. Applicants to interior design programs may be required to submit a portfolio with drawings that confirm their artistic abilities. Examples of several interior designer associations include: American Society of Interior Designers ASID provides members with discounts on professional insurance, contract documents and education. Understanding the relationship between form and space, the principles of combining scale, color, form, and texture with contrast, proportion, and other design elements. How to Apply for Certification Review the education and experience requirements to ensure your eligibility. Scoring is divided into the following content categories: graphics and presentation standards, design solution, elevation plan, mechanical plan, and construction plan. The second year of experience may be in a related industry. Integrating necessary systems such as plumbing, electrical wiring, etc. Bath Professional is a path for the dealer, distributor, fabricator, installer, remodeler, manufacturer, sales representative, or any other segment of the industry to validate their knowledge, experience, dedication and professionalism in the kitchen and bath industry. The NKBA holds applications on file for two years. This individual is qualified to work with our certified designers to meet the needs of the consumer. While interior designers and interior decorators may be confused with one another, their roles are actually quite different. Accessible—interior designers specializing in accessibility work to make a building more accessible to people who are elderly or who have disabilities. No formal design experience is required. You may contact Member Engagement at to confirm your education hours. NKBA also offers online courses that help candidates fulfill the educational requirements for certification. Coordinate and collaborate with contractors, engineers, architects, plumbers and other professionals in order to make sure completed project fulfills all requirements. Return to top What key skills are required for interior designers? Interior designers typically do drafting and design work while interacting with architects, engineers, and other designers. Apply for internships and entry-level jobs in interior design. Interpersonal—interior designers work closely with clients and other professionals on collaborative design projects. The state of California has a different interior designer licensing exam offered by the California Council for Interior Design Certification. Design or select and purchase art, accessories, and furnishings for the space. Their key responsibilities generally include but are not limited to: Consult with clients in order to determine the requirements, goals, budget and limitations of the design project. Courses should be documented as accurately as possible on the application. Certifications are a way for interior designers to indicate specialization in a certain field. About 38 percent worked for specialized design services, while 21 percent worked in engineering, architectural, and related industries. The CKBD Exam consists of multiple-choice questions testing on both kitchen and bath competencies. To become certified, candidates must complete at least two years of professional experience, one of which must be in the kitchen or bath industry, as well as 30 hours of NKBA-approved college coursework or NKBA classes. Interior designers at specialized design firms have a projected employment growth of 27 percent nationally between and bls. Interior decorators focus on creating a certain aesthetic in a room through their selection and positioning of furnishings, upholstery, and decorations. As licensing regulations for interior designers vary from state to state, candidates should research the specific requirements of their state of residence. Examples of interior design courses in these programs include but are not limited to: Design Fundamentals and Principles—the fundamentals of building a harmonious and well-proportioned environment. Some states require that candidates pass the National Council for Interior Design Qualification NCIDQ exam and obtain licensure in order to officially use the title of interior designer. Interior designers have dynamic work that involves a lot of individual measuring, analyzing, drafting, and designing, while also discussing and coordinating with other people involved in the project. Complete the application and include all applicable college transcripts, work experience verification, client references, and professional affidavits. If your last application is over two years old, you must submit an additional application and application fee. Interior decorators do not have to work with AutoCAD, and they do not collaborate with architects or engineers in the way that interior designers regularly do. Courses should be documented accurately on the application. While interior designers must undergo formal training, interior decorators typically do not require specific schooling in their profession. In May, this eligibility option also requires 3,000 hours of qualifying work experience.

NKBA APPROVED COLLEGE COURSEWORK